17 April 2007 – JEC today announced that it has been accredited an ISO 14001:2004 environmental management system certification by Hong Kong Quality Assurance Agency (HKQAA).

ISO 14001: 2004 is an environmental management standard. It specifies a set of environmental management requirements for environmental management systems. The purpose of this standard is to help all types of organisations to protect the environment, to prevent pollution, and to improve their environmental performance. Renewal of accreditation is dependent on evidence of performance improvements.

"Environmental standards are constantly evolving and it has been our objective not only to keep up with such standards but also to better them," said James Graham, Chief Executive of JEC. "We have placed a top priority on being a responsible corporate citizen to the communities in which we operate without compromising the highest quality standards for our products and services. The ISO 14001:2004 certificate is a testament to our commitment to providing our customers with world-class products, services and solutions."

The certification awarded to JEC covers the system design, supply, installation, testing, commissioning and maintenance services of electrical and mechanical equipment including heating, ventilation, air-conditioning, solid waste handling, water pumping and treatment, sewage treatment, material handling, transport, power generating, lifting appliances, fire services, security systems, railway and workshop equipment and supply & installation of building products.
